The incorporation of [<sup>14</sup>C]arachidonate into phospholipids and ethanolamine glycerophospholipids from brain synaptosomes was studied in rats fed diets enriched with n-3 polyunsaturated fatty acids (PUFA) ranging from 0.1 to 0.5%. The formation of arachidonic acid metabolites was also investigated following the incorporation of [<sup>14</sup>C]arachidonate into phosphatidylethanolamine. The biosynthetic activity of the phospholipids was also determined in the cerebral cortex of animals fed control or n-3 PUFA diets. In the brain synaptosomes n-3 PUFA incorporation into phospholipids varied from 0.5-1.0%, with 20:5 n-3 and 22:6 n-3 being the major acyl residues. These fatty acids decreased the incorporation of [<sup>14</sup>C]arachidonate into phospholipids, without affecting the synthesis of ethanolamine glycerophospholipids. In addition, the incorporation of arachidonate into phosphatidylethanolamine was also decreased. Decreasing the n-3 PUFA levels in the diet led to a high incorporation of arachidonate into phospholipids, with a decrease in the synthesis of phosphatidylethanolamine.Q: What's a good proxy to moderate the volume of incoming messages for my app?
